

THE CHALLENGE

Homelessness is a capacity problem.

On any given night across Greater Richmond, hundreds of our neighbors face homelessness or housing instability: veterans, older adults, people with disabilities, and individuals recovering from a health crisis who need more than a temporary bed - they need a home.

Permanent Supporting Housing is the proven solution to homelessness.

The research is settled: permanent supportive housing, meaning affordable homes paired with voluntary support services, is among the most effective ways to end chronic homelessness. People stay housed, their health improves, and they reconnect with their communities.

Greater Richmond needs more permanent supportive housing to meet the needs of our community. SupportWorks Housing has built that path for nearly four decades, and our region is ready to take the next step.

Gateway Park is that next step.

WHY SUPPORTIVE HOUSING WORKS

◆ Stability that lasts

Safe, permanent homes paired with voluntary services, not another temporary bed.

◆ Better health outcomes

Stable housing means fewer ER visits, stronger physical and mental health, and greater independence.

◆ A stronger region

Lower public-system costs, safer neighborhoods, and measurable return on every dollar invested.

Virginia's oldest and largest permanent supportive housing provider, and a trusted partner to local governments, health systems, and community organizations, marking our fortieth anniversary in 2028.

WHERE ARE WE TRYING TO GO?

Gateway Park is the first of four.

To match the scale of need across Greater Richmond, our region needs Gateway Park plus three more permanent supportive housing developments — roughly 300 homes for neighbors facing the highest barriers to stable housing.

Help us finish what we've started.

The Greater Richmond region has already shown what's possible. Now we invite you to help complete the vision.

Public resources alone cannot meet the growing need for supportive housing. Private philanthropy has always carried the boldest solutions to our region's hardest problems, and this moment is no different.

Gateway Park is the next chapter. The Resilience Reserve keeps it durable. The capacity investment makes sure SupportWorks is ready for the next decade. Together, we can create homes, stability, and opportunity.

THE PROJECT

Gateway Park is the next step to ending homelessness in Greater Richmond.

Sixty new permanent supportive housing apartments in Richmond's Highland Park neighborhood. Affordable homes paired with coordinated, on-site support services designed to help residents reach long-term stability and independence.

Gateway Park is distinguished not only by what it provides, but by how it was built: a regional partnership of local governments, philanthropy, community leaders, and housing advocates who share one vision: partnering together to end homelessness in their community.

It's a model built to be repeated. Gateway Park will be the next sixty homes. It won't be the last.

Gateway Park breaks ground in 2027 and opens in 2028, the year SupportWorks marks its fortieth anniversary.
